DESIRE TO SERVE—PLUS ABILITY

F. J. LAMEY
MUTUAL LEADER HONOURED

The Mutual Life of Canada has released its Honour List, recognizing Mr. F. J. LAMEY, Blairmore, for outstanding service to his community in the Club Year recently closed. He has again qualified as a member of the Leaders' Century Club.
Qualifications for Club membership requires not only the writing of a large volume of new business, but, more important, the writing from year to year of "quality" business, that is, life insurance that is continued in force. These two factors, combined with a high personal standard of confidential service to policyholders, earn for Mutual Life representatives membership in the production clubs.

EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

A successful Employment Service may be operated only by maintenance of a fine spirit of co-operation between employers, authorities and employees.

Quite frequently the problem of insufficient help arises in one specific industry. This problem can be met only by calling representatives of the Employment Service together with those of the industry involved and having the two interested bodies map out ways and means of recruiting labour.

In the garment industry, the problem was one of education. The public had to be educated to the fact that Winnipeg has a needle trade industry second to none in Canada—and to maintain that position it would be necessary to have a large number of workers enter the trade and undergo the training necessary to become skilled employees.

The problem was difficult. Generally, workers suitable to the needle trade were in short supply. However, a conference was arranged between officials of the National Employment Service, the Provincial Government and the needle trade industry. Training methods in other textile centres were studied with a view to their incorporation in the Winnipeg district.

Plans are now being formulated for a training institute which is to be situated in Winnipeg. When it will be under direction of the Provincial Minister of Education and should supply this particular industry with sufficient trained help that the garment, cloak, and glove makers will be able to maintain the high position they now hold.

Employers are now realizing more than ever before the assistance they may get through their Employment Service. The National Employment Service is a community service, and as such stands ready to aid employers, both large and small, in securing their proper labour force.

THE GOLF LINKS

Lake of Shining Waters in background, P.E.I. National Park
Prince Edward Island, Canada

Golf may be played under ideal conditions on the new Green Gables links in the Cavendish section of the park. Shiring the sand dunes along the sea shore, and extending back into the pastoral country side of the Island, the 18-hole links at Green Gables offer a delightful combination of scenic and inland course resembling some of the links of Scotland. Devices of modern landscape architecture have been employed in designing and constructing the course, which has several water hazards and a remarkable assortment of holes. Many of the points portrayed in the literature associated with the region have been woven into the layout, and golfers may play over holes called "The Lake of Shining Waters", "Dryad's Bubble", "Mathew's Field", and "Haunted Wood". The route of play, location of tees, and selection of sites for greens have been carefully planned to preserve natural features associated with the stories.

COLLEGE CONDITIONS

As colleges and universities all across Canada re-open this year, many students will face unfamiliar conditions. Difficulties of studying will be intensified if they don't find congenial quarters. Particularly, they will learn the need of proper food, sleep and healthful recreation.

National Health authorities have a suggestion for co-eds who will be using a grill. They suggest that the young ladies obtain from any provincial or municipal health department, copies of the publication on nutrition entitled, "Its good business, girls, to eat well."

CAR ACCIDENTS ON

INCREASE AT NIGHT

With shorter periods of daylight at hand, car drivers need to use extra care to avoid accidents, according to warnings given by officials of the Alberta Motor Association.

Statistics compiled by the National Safety Council reveal that the night fatal accident rate per mile is three times as high as the daytime rate. These conclusions were reached after special studies.

The survey showed that over a 12-month period, three out of every five fatal accidents occur at night, when the traffic volume is only one-fourth of the daytime volume.

There has been a steady rise in the number of night fatal accidents with the rise in rural areas running as high as 20 per cent.

Highest death rates were reached in December and January when there were some 3000 deaths in motor vehicles. The months were June and July when daylight hours are at a maximum.

The effects of reduced visibility on the death rate were revealed in the figures showing 98 per cent of the pedestrians killed between the hours of 6:00 and 7:00 p.m. met their death during November, December and January when that hour is dark.

The report is convincing proof of the need of motorists being extra careful when driving at night.

LET'S NOT FORGET

The stock was fluctuating over a suburban home when a doctor's car pulled up to the curb with a shriek of brakes and the medico leaped out, vanishing into the driveway. Inside, a gulping and pale dandy-to-be waved him up the stairs.

Suddenly the doctor reappeared. "Gotta see a drive?" he gasped.

The prospective papa produced one. A couple of minutes later he was back.

"Gotta monkey wrench?" he blurted.

The near-daddy brought one out. Again the young doctor disappeared, but returned a third time, this time his request being for a hammer and chisel.

"But Holy Cow," gaped the one who caused all this, "what goes on? Is it a boy or a girl?"

"To early to say yet," replied the doctor. "I can't get my instrument case open."

Britain's Coal Mines

THE CRITICAL ECONOMIC SITUATION which has developed in Britain since the war is a matter of concern not only to the people there, but to this, and to many other countries which are linked to her by political and commercial ties. There are, indeed, few people who are not deeply concerned over this grim crisis which has followed on the long years of the war, when Britain literally threw her entire resources into the fight. It was not generally anticipated then that the end of the war would bring the tremendous economic problems with which the British people are now faced, and it is realized that this is a problem which extends far beyond the boundaries of the British Isles. What is being done to assist Britain at this time, as well as what the government there is doing to meet the situation should be of interest and concern to all of us.

Need Coal To Provide Power

One of the fundamental causes of the present crisis is lack of sufficient coal to supply power for the great industrial output which is needed to produce goods for Britain to sell abroad, and at the same time to supply enough for the nation's domestic needs. In an effort to solve this problem the government has inaugurated an intensive mechanization programme for the coal mines, which involves the spending of thirty-six million dollars for coal-face machinery. This is announced to be one of the main points in the National Coal Board's plan for a large-scale re-organization of the mining industry. There are also twenty major schemes for sinking new pits and for reconstructing existing mines, each at a cost of approximately twelve million dollars. In addition, a long-term project for developing new mines and improving existing ones has been drawn up, to extend over the next nine years.

Will Surmount Present Crisis

Further provisions which have been made for increasing the efficiency of the coal mines include the appointment of a Chief Scientist in each division, with staffs and laboratories equipped to provide scientific assistance and advice. There have also been set up facilities for chemical, medical and physical research which will help to improve production, and also to increase the safety of the mines, and guard the health of the workers. During the war the British people failed to be daunted by seemingly insurmountable difficulties, and it is unlikely that they will meet defeat in the present crisis. It is apparent that they are making a mighty effort to solve the fundamental problem of coal production and it is to be hoped that this project, and others which they undertake, will meet with success. It is also to be hoped that through these efforts, and with what help other nations can extend, Britain will again find her rightful place in the world economic order, and enjoy prosperity at home.

He was a shy young man, and when his partner decided she did not want to dance the next, he was at a loss for something to talk about.

A Pole was passing through Berlin with his small son. The boy saw a huge statue of Hitler and inquired who he was. "Why he's the man who freed us from our chains," the father said. "You know, mother's also gold chains and my watch chain."

A teen-ager who applied for an office job on a St. Louis newspaper was asked to fill out an application form. When he came to a place which said "Bank," he wrote: "Piggy."

He appeared before the company officer, charged with using insulting language to his sergeant. "Please, sir," he protested. "I was only answering a question."

"What question?" snapped the officer. "Well, sir, the sergeant said, 'What do you think I am?' and I told him."

The teacher was giving a health talk to her class and warned her pupils never to kiss animals or birds. "Can you give me an instance of the danger of this, Bobby?" she asked one boy.

"Yes, miss. My Aunt Alice used to kiss her dog."

"And what happened?" asked the teacher. "It died."

The Mrs. "Mary we have breakfast promptly at 8 o'clock."

New Maid: "All right, mum, but if I ain't down don't wait for me."

Bride: "What makes you think so, George, dear?"

"Why, even the waiter has brought us rice pudding."

"I have never taken a girl out in my life," confesses a wealthy bachelor. Explains perhaps why he is wealthy.

"And how do you find married life Jock?" Sandy asked him on return from his honeymoon. "Och, marriage is a wonderful thing an' all," was the reply. "I'm wearing a pair of shoes someone tied to my wedding car."

Move To Legalize Use Of Margarine

Vancouver North Member To Sponsor Bill In Parliament

(By F. Swanson In Ottawa Citizen)

OTTAWA.—Fight to legalize the manufacture and sale of margarine in Canada is to be carried to the House of Commons at the next session of parliament by James Sinclair (Lab.-Vancouver North) who plans to introduce a bill permitting the butter substitute, it was learned here.

Mr. Sinclair's bill will be the latest in a long series of attempts to rescind legislation which prohibits the importation, manufacture or sale of the butter substitute in Canada.

During the last session of parliament, Senator W. D. Euler introduced such a bill into the Upper Chamber which was defeated after long and hectic debate by the government's majority in the Senate. In view of the fact that Mr. Sinclair is a government supporter, the fate of his bill and its progress in the House will be an interesting development.

Since the defeat of Senator Euler's measure at the last session, he has indicated that he planned to challenge the validity of government legislation prohibiting the importation and manufacture of margarine in the Dominion. So far, however, no court action has resulted.

Canada today is the only country of the world which prohibits the manufacture of margarine. If the bill is passed by both houses, it would permit the sale of margarine in Canada for the first time in 24 years.

Gophers Still A Nuisance On Prairies

MOOSE JAW, Sask.—Many an observer in these parts claims that the gopher, cheerful, chirping little rodent which inhabits most of the Prairie region, is fading from the scene.

But others, long suffering under the annual inroads made on crops and gardens by the whistling beastie, hold that the gopher population is subject to cycles much as rabbits are. However, while the little chap may come and go spasmodically, an interesting point is that he is not really a gopher. He's a gause. Seems the French termed him a gause after a few of their horses had their feet pop into gophers' burrows. Gause means honeycomb which is a pretty good description of what a piece of ground looks like after a gause has finished with it.

Gause runs to various species—one being a puzzling creature under the Mississippi which resembles a frustrated land tortoise and lives in a burrow. The Prairies have three kinds of gause: the striped, the grey and the 'Richardson's'. Most gauses, however, like digging, eating seeds and annoying Prairie farmers. For further identification of gause, it is interesting to note that the word also means a kind of cake or waffle in French, that is.

NEW JET-PROPELLED FIGHTER PLANE FOR BRITAIN'S NAVY

A new fighter aircraft which is being adopted by the Royal Navy has just made its first flight. It is a jet-propelled plane capable of speeds of more than 600 miles an hour which has been designed and built by Hawker Aircraft, and is planned for building in two different versions. One will be a land-based plane while the other will be planned to operate from aircraft carriers abroad. Each will have a single Rolls-Royce Nene turbo-jet engine which develops a thrust of 5,000 lbs.

Tiny Insects Produce Furniture Shellac

The name "shellac" is derived from the ancient Sanskrit word "lac", which means "one hundred thousand", and is indicative of the countless tiny insects which produce this strange resin.

These microscopic parasites, called coccus lacca by scientists, settle in droves on the lac trees of the East, and thrust their needle-like probers through the bark of the trees and into the moist sap wood beneath it. While feeding on the tree, the lac bug gives off a resinous secretion, creating a cocoon which eventually forms a hard shell around the branches. During the lac season, the natives swarm into the woods and knock off this hard shell, which is called stick-lac.

Health LEAGUE OF CANADA TOPICS OF VITAL INTEREST

WHOOPING COUGH AND DIPHTHERIA DANGEROUS ILLS

Some public health workers are inclined to believe that the public dramatization of poliomyelitis outbreaks has tended to take attention from facts surrounding certain other diseases—just as deadly as polio, but which, unlike polio, can be prevented.

For instance diphtheria and whooping cough, year in and year out, each take many more lives than polio and each is preventable. True, polio is a dangerous, crippling and killing disease, but diphtheria and whooping cough are dangerous killers too. It is tragic that medical science has been unsuccessful in attempts to develop a polio preventive, but it also is tragic that the Canadian public does not co-operate 100 per cent. in using the available means to wipe out and curb diseases which are just as deadly but which are preventable.

It is to be hoped that the untiring efforts of medical science to develop a preventive for polio will be successful, and that the Canadian people will take full advantage of the preventive once it is discovered. However, polio will continue to take a toll if the presence of a polio preventive is ignored in some instances as are today's preventives for diphtheria and whooping cough.

Vaccination has just about wiped out smallpox—toxoid can do just the same thing with diphtheria and whooping cough vaccine is an extremely effective whooping cough preventive.

It is to be sincerely hoped that we soon will have the benefit of a polio preventive, but in the meantime we should make use of the disease preventive now in our possession. That is why the Health League of Canada, the Dominion's leading voluntary health education association, has designated the week of October 5th as "National Immunization Week".

This annual national observance is designed to draw attention to the fact that certain communicable diseases—particularly diphtheria, whooping cough and smallpox—are preventable. It also is a means of making known the fact that federal, provincial and municipal health departments throughout the country are working continuously to eliminate these preventable diseases.

All that is needed to wipe them out is the 100 per cent. co-operation of the general public. The tragedy of the public's ignorance or apathy in regard to the available preventives for diphtheria and whooping cough is written in the statistics for 1946 which show close to 500 deaths in Canada from these two diseases alone.

SUBSCRIBER HAS PROVED ADVERTISING DOES PAY

When John Elder of Hensall, Ontario, renewed his subscription to the Graphic of September for the 50th time recently, he told of the results he obtained from a small classified advertisement he ran in the paper several months ago. Already he has sold 51 ladders and enquiries are still coming in. "I have done a lot of advertising in my day, and I find it pays," Mr. Elder said.

New Typewriter Must Talk Fast

PROVIDENCE, R.I.—And now, a typewriter that can talk back. George Coffey, 58-year-old machinist, demonstrated his machine here. Through an arrangement of electrical contacts and phonograph, recorder and reproducer, when the operator strikes the letter "T" for instance, the machine promptly announces: "double-yes". It repeats through a radio amplifier the name of whatever letter or number key is struck on the typewriter keyboard.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP

An all-time high in trade union membership in this country was established in 1946 according to the 36th Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada for the year ending December 31, 1946, soon to be released by the Dominion Department of Labour.

The report shows that at the end of 1946, trade union membership in this country stood almost 15 per cent higher than the previous record figure established in 1944, and more than 120 per cent above the 1938 total.

The annual membership figures for 1938 to 1946 inclusive show the striking advance in the trade union movement in Canada during World War II and after, tracing clearly our wartime industrial development and postwar expansion. With the exception of 1945, when the major effects of physical reconstruction were being felt, total membership in trade unions showed an increase each year from the previous one with the largest increases being registered in 1941, 1942, 1943 and 1946.

In the space of five years from 1939 to 1944, trade union membership jumped from 358,967 to 724,188. The year 1945 showed a reduction of 13,000 union members, but 1946 recorded the greatest increase of all with total membership jumping from 711,117 to 831,697. Of an estimated 3,153,000 non-agricultural wage and salary workers, 14 years of age or more, 26.4 per cent were members of trade unions at the end of 1946.

This annual report on labour organization, which has been published by the Labour Department since 1911, is compiled from reports of national and international unions, independent local unions and central labour organizations. The Department also requested reports from 4,635 local union branches known to be in existence in 1946.

400,000 Left Feet that never push a clutch!

GM HYDRA-MATIC DRIVE has been proved by nearly 400,000 Oldsmobile owners in billions of miles of "no-clutch, no-shift" driving!

400,000 Left Feet... left without a thing to do! Because Hydra-Matic Drive eliminates the clutch pedal and all clutch pushing. 400,000 right hands... on the steering wheel where they belong! Because Hydra-Matic Drive shifts gears automatically.

Oldsmobile first introduced this revolutionary advancement almost 8 years ago! And since then, nearly 400,000 owners of Hydra-Matic Oldsmobiles have found a new freedom in driving. These owners have driven literally billions of miles—without ever shifting, or pushing a clutch.

After these 8 years, Hydra-Matic Drive is still the only "drive" that eliminates the clutch pedal and shifts gears automatically through four forward speeds. The lowest-priced car to offer GM Hydra-Matic Drive* is the smart new Oldsmobile. It's ahead in performance—automatically. Ahead in appearance—dramatically. That's why people say—emphatically... "It's SMART to Own an Olds!"

The demand for Oldsmobile with the new GM Hydra-Matic Drive* is so widespread that it still greatly exceeds the supply. Make sure your present car carries you conveniently and safely through the waiting period by having it serviced regularly by your Oldsmobile dealer.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND NATIONAL PARK

If that exceptional child of fiction, Anne of Green Gables, created in the novels of Lucy Maud Montgomery, were to return to her enchanted home in Prince Edward Island today, she would find little change. Most of her old familiar haunts are still in existence. The old farm house, Green Gables, with which readers of "Anne" stories became so intimately acquainted, has been faithfully preserved in every detail and is now available to visitors as a tea-room. The names of many other beauty spots in the vicinity frequented by the imaginative and impulsive Anne have also been preserved. They all form part of one of Canada's national parks, thus insuring their preservation for all time.

Prince Edward Island National Park was established in 1937. It extends as a coast-line strip for nearly 25 miles along the north shore of the Island and contains some of the finest bathing beaches in Eastern Canada. Included in the area are Green Gables and many other spots immortalized in the famous novelist's "Anne" stories.

Prince Edward Island National Park is unique among the national parks of Canada. Even if the territory embraced by it were entirely without historic or literary interest it would still be one of the most attractive seaside playgrounds on the continent.

The park is noted for its broad, sandy bathing beaches, reddish-brown in colour; (one of the features that Anne noticed on her first journey to Green Gables) and beaten smooth by the action of the surf. Behind the beaches are sand dunes and red sandstone cliffs. Across the mouths of several of the lovely bays in the area are small islands or shoals giving protection to the inner waters. During the summer and early autumn bathing conditions are almost ideal. The temperature is moderate, the air invigorating, and the water here is warmer than at many points far to the south along the Atlantic seaboard.

The woods and flowers which Anne loved best of all are still there. White birch, red maple, white and black spruce, poplar, tamarack, balsam, fir,

Green Gables has for years been an unfailing point of interest for visitors to Prince Edward Island, and is now available as a tea room. Although repaired and painted, the original building has been faithfully preserved in all its details, and an attendant is on hand to escort visitors through its rooms. Many other points of interest associated with the "Anne" stories, including the "Haunted Wood" and "Lover's Lane", are easily reached by paths and trails which lead from the building. An excellent golf course has been laid out in the vicinity, and visitors will also find a campground nearby. A modern dressing room for bathers and swimmers has been built at the beach.

mountain ash, and sumach grow abundantly in the vicinity of Green Gables and Dalway House. Wild flowers and shrubs grow in profusion and fill the air with their pleasant aroma. Indeed, Anne should find even greater interest and inspiration than ever in Green Gables and its vicinity. If she decided to play a round of golf over the fascinating Green Gables links she would come across many of the names which she gave to some of her favorite spots — The Haunted Wood, Dryad's Bubble, Lake of Shining Waters — names that will live forever in the memory of those who have read the stories of the joys and sorrows, the adventures and the achievements of "one of the sweetest creations of child life ever written".

ALBERTA TO EXTEND ITS HIGHWAY PROGRAM

The Provincial Government's road policy was revealed in broad terms when Hon. A. J. Hock, Minister of Economic Affairs addressed the Dominion Provincial tourist convention in Ottawa last week.

"I give you the assurance that it is our policy to extend our modern highway system to connecting highways in our neighboring provinces as rapidly as possible," said the Minister.

"We intend to link paved highways with the highways of British Columbia through the Crownest Pass, through the Kicking Horse Pass, through the Yellowhead Pass and in the Peace River district. We expect to do the same with highways leading to connecting highways in Saskatchewan."

BLAIRMORE DELIVERED PRICES OF GENERAL MOTORS CARS

FROM time to time, as a matter of public information, we have published the Retail Delivered Prices of General Motors Automobiles.

In accordance with this practice and to eliminate any uncertainties or confusion, we are again publishing the present Retail Delivered Prices. These prices include Standard Factory Equipment, Dominion Taxes and spare tire. Provincial and Municipal Taxes where such apply, license fee, and optional equipment are, of course, additional.

We sell these makes and models at the prices shown. You may rest assured, we will distribute them as fairly as possible with proper regard for orders placed with us and dependent upon the availability of models.

Should you be offered, from some other source, a new car, or one with low mileage, we suggest that you pay no more than the prices listed. You will obviously find it to your advantage to wait a little longer, until we are in a position to deliver a car against your own order.

We are sorry to say that delivery to you may be delayed for some time yet. This is due, in particular, to the shortage of many materials. General Motors has done a splendid production job under the circumstances and expects to steadily increase the rate of production. Meanwhile, these conditions, combined with the wide popularity of General Motors cars, and such an unprecedented demand, mean that delay in some instances is quite inescapable. We entreat your patience and understanding while the shortage exists.

We realize that our success depends upon the confidence and goodwill of our many customers. We will strive at all times, through good business practices, to justify, and therefore retain, this most valuable asset.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

The Beggar

By Matthew F. Christopher

THE knock sounded like the soft click of a night latch. Naomi opened the door, and he stood there—a tall, humble looking figure whose sunken grey eyes peered unobtrusively from a sun-leathered face.

If Philip had been here he would have closed the door, she would say. "I'm sorry, but we have nothing left." Or, just, "I'm sorry." But Philip wasn't here. And it so happened that she was ready to place the food on the table. He might intend to convey the impression that it was coincidental, she thought, but the noon whistle had just blown two minutes ago.

"Good morning, Ma'am," he said. He smiled, a tender smile that broke through his grey whiskers. "Would you be kind enough to give an old man a—bit to eat?"

Then it was as if Philip was behind her, staring over her shoulders glaring with those level brown eyes of his, saying, "Tell him to go on his way. Tell him we have nothing. Tell him—." He wouldn't have cared about the smell of the hot food waiting out of the door. He simply had no use for beggars. Of course, he thought he had reason to be. Heaven forbid! All these poor creatures weren't like that one.

The sun flashed a welcoming signal on her bright smile, and touched the high tones of her smoothly planned face. "Come in," she said. "You're just in time." "Thank you, Ma'am."

He had a cautious quality about his step as he crossed the threshold into the kitchen. As if each move was calculated, and none more taken than was necessary. She could almost hear Philip say, "See how tense he is? You got to watch that kind. That characteristic quiver isn't exactly human nature." Funny why she kept thinking of Philip, as if his presence were really real.

Connie ran in from the dining room, her brown curls bobbing on her head like wet coils of spring. When she saw the man, she stopped. Her black eyes rose bewilderedly to the man's head.

"Go back and get in your chair, Connie," Naomi said. "We're going to have company." She gave the beggar a radiant smile, and pointed to a chair in the dining room. "You may sit there. The hat can go on the bureau behind you."

Suddenly she saw her purse there. She had placed it there after having brought home the things from the grocer's. But it would look silly now to remove it, she thought. Even if he did—she felt ridiculous thinking it—but even if he were one of Philip's characters, there was only sixty cents to the penny in the purse.

"Thank you, Ma'am," he looked at Connie. His eyes, deep in the hollows of his bony face, pinched in a smile. He bent forward slightly, and placed his blue-corded hands on his knees. "Hello, little girl?"

It would have made no difference in the world to Philip that he was old. The older, the more experienced; that Naomi experienced, the craftier was Philip's philosophical slant on it. He gave no quarter, demanded none. They were all molded from the same stuff. "Wolves in sheep's clothing," Philip said.

Naomi heard the man chuckle as she stood at the stove, mixing the gravy with the potatoes. She looked around and saw that Connie hadn't moved. Except that now she had her thumb in her mouth, and with the other hand was nervously curling up one end of the bow behind her dress.

"Connie, please don't do that," she said softly. "Go sit in your chair like mother told you. The man won't hurt you."

"Shucks, no!" he exclaimed. "I won't hurt you! But, if I'll help, I'll sit down, too. How will that be?" Connie didn't answer, but apparently it suited her fine. Naomi smiled. She brought the food to the table, put some in Connie's plate, and urged the man to help himself. He ate, unobtrusively, but he didn't take much. Just a little of each, what would ordinarily be an appetizer for Philip.

He pushed the plate away from him when he was finished, patted his skinny stomach with comfort and satisfaction.

"There's lots more," Naomi said. He shook his head, and the faint air that he stirred moved his thin, white hair. "No, Ma'am, thank, I'm through. It was delicious, believe me, Ma'am. I've never had a meal that could come up to this, in years. I'm certainly thankful to you."

"I'm glad you liked it," she said. Philip would rave when he'd hear. She'd tell him, of course. Why not? He probably didn't have a penny in his pocket. She thought, if Philip could be here, now, if he could just sit at a corner and watch, he would eat out of his mind all those ridiculous beliefs he had about these unfortunate human beings.

Oh, Philip, your silly ideas! But she'd tell him, and she would laugh when he'd rave.

"How about some doughnuts?" she asked. "Doughnuts?" His smile shown again through his silvery bristles. "Well—I'm kinda full, Ma'am."

"Shall I put some in a bag for you? They're home-made?" She jumped up, before he had a chance to answer. "Wait, I've got some paper bags in the kitchen. I'll put in a few for you."

Thank you, she said. She saw Connie's eyes stare in awe at her as she circled the table and went into the kitchen. She picked out a bag from the little pile in the cupboard nook, and from the oven got a half a dozen powder-sugared doughnuts and dropped them into the bag.

She returned and gave it to the man. "Here," she said. "You can eat them on your way."

He grinned. His teeth looked messy, but his smile was tender. "Thank you, Ma'am. May God bless your wonderful little family."

"Thank you," she smiled, and watched him pick up his hat and leave.

"Back in the dining room, she sat down again and began finishing her meal.

"Mamma?" "Yes, dear?" she glanced up. Connie's black eyes were staring very peculiarly at her. "What is it, darling?" "That man opened your purse," Connie said.

Naomi stared incredulously at her daughter. "Connie," her voice was sharp. "Are you sure?" "Yes, Mamma."

Connie, she thought of Philip. Quickly, she rose from the chair, swooped the purse of the top of the bureau. She flicked it open with her thumb, and gazed into it with trembling lips. And, suddenly—"Connie!" Her voice shrilled high, bell-like. "Connie, look!" She was smiling radiantly.

The child stared blandly at the old, wrinkled, one-dollar bill Naomi was holding in her hand.

HE SAID "WHOA" AND MEANT IT—Bert Hedges of Etobicoke, Ont., shouted "Whoa, buddy," when he saw a man making away with a turkey from his farm. The man didn't "whoa," so Bert let go a blast from his shotgun. Police later picked up a man, suffering slight wounds and posterior ventilation.

Wheat To Inspire Canadian Hairdo

WINNIPEG.—It may seem a bit startling, but Western Canada's famed wheat may inspire a hair-dressing style.

Charles Tugwell of Toronto, at a convention of Western Canada hair dressers here, said there is no reason why Canada and Western Canada particularly should not take a lead in setting fashions.

"We have hair dressers and stylists as skilled as any in the world and we believe such a convention as this—it is the West's first—will encourage them to develop individual styles."

"This autumn we are evolving styles for evening which sweep the hair upward. Western wheat inspires a lavish treatment that is quite original."

He pushed the plate away from him when he was finished, patted his skinny stomach with comfort and satisfaction.

"There's lots more," Naomi said. He shook his head, and the faint air that he stirred moved his thin, white hair. "No, Ma'am, thank, I'm through. It was delicious, believe me, Ma'am. I've never had a meal that could come up to this, in years. I'm certainly thankful to you."

"I'm glad you liked it," she said. Philip would rave when he'd hear. She'd tell him, of course. Why not? He probably didn't have a penny in his pocket. She thought, if Philip could be here, now, if he could just sit at a corner and watch, he would eat out of his mind all those ridiculous beliefs he had about these unfortunate human beings.

Oh, Philip, your silly ideas! But she'd tell him, and she would laugh when he'd rave.

"How about some doughnuts?" she asked. "Doughnuts?" His smile shown again through his silvery bristles. "Well—I'm kinda full, Ma'am."

"Shall I put some in a bag for you? They're home-made?" She jumped up, before he had a chance to answer. "Wait, I've got some paper bags in the kitchen. I'll put in a few for you."

Thank you, she said. She saw Connie's eyes stare in awe at her as she circled the table and went into the kitchen. She picked out a bag from the little pile in the cupboard nook, and from the oven got a half a dozen powder-sugared doughnuts and dropped them into the bag.

She returned and gave it to the man. "Here," she said. "You can eat them on your way."

He grinned. His teeth looked messy, but his smile was tender. "Thank you, Ma'am. May God bless your wonderful little family."

"Thank you," she smiled, and watched him pick up his hat and leave.

"Back in the dining room, she sat down again and began finishing her meal.

Wedding Route To Be Lined By Troops

LONDON.—Princess Elizabeth will ride to Westminster Abbey to be married to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten on Nov. 20 along a route lined every yard of the way by contingents of the armed services, the Lord Chamberlain said.

The Princess, escorted by the King, will drive from Buckingham Palace along The Mall to Admiralty arch. There the procession will turn into Whitehall, pass on into Equestrian Square to the Abbey entrance.

The household cavalry will provide mounted escorts. There will be bands at Buckingham Palace, at various places along the route, and at the Abbey.

Distinction Is Not Appreciated By Boy

LOS ANGELES.—The doctors call eight-year-old Wynnan Rams a rare case but he's not very appreciative of the distinction.

He fell to the ground when a limb broke on a tree, fracturing both forearms.

Not only that but the medicals said the X-rays of each arm were identical—two fractures, same time, same place, same way.

But what impresses Wynnan the most seems to be the fact that he has to wear casts on each arm for a month.

More Men Required For Armed Services

6,000 Men Needed To Fill Canada's Strength Of 38,400

OTTAWA.—About 6,000 men are needed to bring Canada's three armed services to a required strength of 38,400 and a campaign will be launched to get recruits for this active force and for the reserve.

This was made known when a pamphlet entitled "Canada's Defence" was issued under the authority of the Defence Minister, Claxton, rounding up the latest information on the country's defence organization.

The pamphlet also disclosed that a committee was being established to advise the defence minister and the defence committee of the cabinet "on matters of industrial organization," which includes planning for the development of common standards and design in connection with the manufacture of munitions, weapons and equipment.

In the recruiting campaign, the army hopes to boost its present strength of 13,885 to the required 18,750; the air force want to go from its present 11,804 to 12,150 and the navy from 6,821 to 7,500.

Los Angeles Reports Hit-And-Run Horse

LOS ANGELES.—First case of a hit and run horse in this overcrowded community of motor vehicles has been reported.

Cable Burt Grey said that while he was stopped at an intersection for a traffic signal, he felt two severe jolts and, upon investigating, found a big bay mare standing at the rear of the vehicle, kicking in the back end.

The horse fled, but was captured shortly afterward. Police said the animal was the same one that earlier had caused another highway disturbance.

Beneficial To Earn Part Of Education

Too few children appreciate the great sacrifices their parents make to give the young people a better education. It is a beneficial thing for any young man to earn part of his way. That is the only way he can appreciate the value of an education. Later in life when serious problems present themselves they will not be as great an obstacle to the student who worked hard in order to attain knowledge as they would to the student who put in time just for the social life.
